

 In their travels around the world, the clouds at times race along very fast, so fast that the smaller ones often fall behind. Which is exactly what happens to Cloudy. Cloudy is always last because, among other things, she is very curious and often draws closer to Earth to have a better look at what is happening there.

