

Seeing to the harvest was a duty the goddess could not get out of.

Zeus, the father of all gods, had reminded her of this more than once: «Never leave the mortals on their own at harvest time. See that their sickles are always sharp and that the ears are all piled up on the carts before evening falls».